The Person Who Influenced Me the Most

The person who has influenced me the most is Mrs. M. A. Brown because she taught me something that I would never forget in English.

My eight grade year of school second period Mrs. Brown welcomed me into the wonderful world of English. Mrs. Brown was short, heavy set, with short hair, a little old but with a great sense of humor and personality. When I first started out in English class Mrs. Brown came down on me a little hard but I had to be ready. Later on in the year Mrs. Brown grew a little easier and understandable.

Mrs. Brown held me after class every other week to motivate me and help me more. She told me to never forget one of the most important things in English that would help me in high school and college. That important thing was how to write a good essay and said a good paragraph could build up to a great essay. Every since then she kept me after school to write a practice paragraph and told me I was getting better.

Mrs. Brown took me through the writing process every other week also. She started me out prewriting, drafting, revising, editing, and finally publishing my final copy. She made me do each one of these three times back to back. After writing each of these back to back I realized that I was getting better.

Mrs. Brown always told me to keep my head up and keep practicing on writing a good paragraph. From that day until now I still remember Mrs. Brown because she help make a big change in my life. I know that I could keep this in
